

The Song of Sword

As long as I live

This movie takes place in 1597, during the Japanese invasion of Korea, the Imjin War (1592~1598). (0:00) Music begins on a FI from black to a small seaside town. This town has destroyed by the enemy. Admiral Yi Sun-shin was falsely accused and fired. (0:24) He is sitting down a house by the seaside and drinking. (0:41) He thinks of when his mother passed sway. He couldn't close the eyes of her mother because he was moving from the jail to this seaside town. He keeps drinking.

(1:06) In the morning, a guy brought a message from King. In the royal command, "I heard about an ignominious defeat without Admiral Yi. I am very disappointed and also worried about it. It was my fault that I fired you. Now I am lost without resource, so I adjure you to put the navy commander, enter the war again and keep off the enemy."

(1:35) Yi feels sorry for King. He is also afraid of King. King's message reminds him of the last battle and he realizes his unfinished destiny. (1:55) He has been sitting a whole day with eyes closed and thinking of the last battle. Now he is a navy commander, but has not enough ships and soldiers.

(2:26) Finally, he writes an answer to King.

"The enemy will never look down on us as long as I live." (2:50) MX OUT